

To new heights

A new business prospect is fast emerging as Eskom and independent power producers start constructing wind farms in the country.

Super-lifts are going to become the order of the day when construction of Eskom's 100 MW Sere wind farm starts and work on another 180 MW facility in Jeffrey's Bay commences. According to Hillary Erasmus of Plant, Kenya is also exploring this form of energy generation.

Vanguard recently undertook a lift in the Eastern Cape. The task at hand called for the upgrading of its lifting capacity. While lifting contractors are sure to enjoy a sizeable share of this market, Plant is certain that these projects will also create business opportunities for crane rental companies and suppliers of quality mobile cranes suited to the super-lift sector.
